Collisions in Cyberspace on Data Encryption Plan

By PETER H. LEWIS

Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, March 25 — To paraphrase Oscar Wilde, the Clinton Administration threw a couple of its lions into a den of savage Daniels here this week.

As speaking assignments go, the officials from the White House and the National Security Agency might have preferred facing a Congressional Whitewater inquiry to explaining to some 500 people at the annual Computers, Freedom and Privacy Conference here why the Administration wants to make wiretapping access a standard part of all new telephones and personal computers.

But then, the annual C.F.P. conference is traditionally a venue where lions and lambs coexist for a few days, along with corporate personnel and hackers, anarchists, cyberscops and robbers, and paranoids and the many people out to get them. Its sponsors and patrons include the American Express Company, Motorola Inc., Equifax, the Association for Computing Machinery and the John Marshall Law School.

"There is considerable paranoia here, but healthy suspicion is the heart of institutional vitality," said Jerry Berman, executive director of the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a lobbying organization that seeks to guide Government policies in the emerging electronic community called cyberspace.

"A lot of people here are very, very paranoid," agreed a telephone and computer "hacker" who calls himself Emmanuel Goldstein, moments before inviting a reporter to admire the scanning device he finds useful for listening in on cellular phone calls. As with most hackers, Mr. Goldstein's name is borrowed. In his case, it honors a renegade character in

"1984," George Orwell's novel about Big Brother government where privacy is illegal.

And as if to reinforce the paranoia, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation raided the hotel where this conference is being held this morning and arrested a young man fitting the description of a fugitive computer hacker, Kevin Mitnick. The arrested man, who was nabbed in his hotel room in his underwear, had registered using a name that is a known alias of the fugitive. Law enforcement agents attending the conference had noticed the name, checked a police photo of the fugitive and alerted the local F.B.I. office. Although he and his roommates protested that he was not Mr. Mitnick, the man was handcuffed, taken to the local F.B.I. office and fingerprinted. His fingerprints were faxed to a national crime information center. About 30 minutes later, the word came back that the arrested man was not the fugitive.

"They walked me back to the hotel and apologized, basically," he said.

Clipper Chip's Rough Sailing

The sacrificial lions at the conference, David A. Lytel of the President's Office of Science and Technology Policy, and Stewart A. Baker, general counsel for the National Security Agency, quickly found that the audience was not to be enticed by the romance of the open digital highway, that national network where everyone can exchange information electronically, but rather preferred to discuss the Clipper chip.

The Clipper chip is a breathtakingly unpopular proposal by the Administration to make computers and telephones easier for law enforcement officials to bug.

More accurately known as a "key escrow" data encryption system, Clipper is a microprocessor that the Government wants embedded in all new telephones to scramble voice transmissions. A similar chip that encrypts and decrypts data in personal computers is called Tessera.

Phones and computers equipped with the encryption scheme would be protected against eavesdropping by outsiders. The catch is that the Government would hold the "keys" needed to read encrypted messages.

The Clipper proposal has been excoriated not only by privacy advocates here, but also by the high-tech industry that gave Mr. Clinton strong support as a candidate.

"I made them promise that for every minute I have to stay in the ring getting pummeled about Clipper, I get a year added to my retirement benefits," Mr. Lytel quipped.

Mr. Lytel got the assignment as keynote speaker after John Podesta, the President's top assistant for technology issues, backed out. While Mr. Lytel clearly anticipated a spirited debate about Clipper, it was apparent that Washington underestimated the vehemence with which the high-tech community opposes the plan.

"Cryptography is an enormously powerful tool that needs to be controlled, just as we control bombs and rockets," Mr. Lytel said.

"When cryptography is outlawed, only outlaws will have cryptography," a heckler called out.

To Stewart A. Baker, general counsel for the National Security Agency, fell the task of explaining why crooks and terrorists who are smart enough to use data encryption would be stupid enough to use the Government's own data encryption standard. "You shouldn't overestimate the IQ of crooks," he said.

"What I'd like to see," Mr. Baker said, "is people engage the really hard question: Do you want to live in a world where law enforcement cannot do its job because of the need for privacy?"

Sparring in Cyberspace

Strange things happen when people who live in cyberspace meet face to face. Consider the case of Frank E. Carey, a member of the Security and System Reliability Architecture Group at A. T. & T.'s Bell Laboratories in Holmdel, N.J. Mr. Carey's job is to prevent people from stealing phone company services.

Mr. Carey's gray hair suggests that he is at least twice as old as most of the hackers and "phone phreaks" with whom he spars. "The kids are fun," he said. "I enjoy a little repair-tee with them."

Mr. Carey appeared to be genuinely disappointed by the absence this year of Fisher Optik, a young hacker who is now in a Federal penitentiary. It was then that Mr. Carey spied Mr. Goldstein, who publishes a quarterly magazine called 2600 that contains news of the hacker community and handy technical tips.

The magazine, Mr. Goldstein said, is published in Middle Island, L.I.; and has a circulation of 20,000. "The vast majority are newsstand sales," Mr. Goldstein said. "The people who read it don't want to be on lists of any sort."

"He complicates my life," Mr. Carey still smiling.

"The phone companies complicate our lives," Mr. Goldstein shot back, his eyes narrowing under his headband.

After the two cordial adversaries parted, Mr. Carey paused. "This is fun," he said. "Definitely weird, but it's fun."

TEMPERATURE

Fahrenheit thermometers are in common use in the United States, but scientists and all others who use the metric system use the scale called Celsius. This scale is the same as Centigrade, but the National Bureau of Standards has recommended the use of the term Celsius since 1948. See the conversions below:

Celsius to Fahrenheit

Fahrenheit to Celsius

To convert Celsius degrees into Fahrenheit: multiply by 9, divide by 5 and add 32. To convert Fahrenheit into Celsius: subtract 32 from Fahrenheit, multiply by 5, divide by 9.

This is a loan contract secured by property held in collateral by the Pawnbroker herein Lender. Borrower warrants that there are no claims, liens or encumbrances on the property and agrees to hold the Lender harmless and to reimburse the Lender for any losses arising therefrom. This is a single term contract written for four (4) months. At redemption a new loan may be issued or granted at the Lender's discretion. This contract shall not be assigned without the consent of the Lender.

Collateral may be redeemed at any time during the period defined above or during the "grace" period (see below). For redemption the Borrower will be required to pay in addition to the amount loaned all interest and fees as outlined in the schedule above. The Lender reserves the right to 72 hour notice of intention to redeem. All of Borrower's property held in collateral shall serve as additional collateral for all outstanding obligations owed by Borrower to the Lender. Partial payment does not extend the loan period.

If collateral is not redeemed in the four month loan period, the Lender shall notify the Borrower by regular mail for which a certificate of mailing is issued by the United States Post Office, addressed to Borrower's last known address, of termination of the loan contract and extending the right of redemption for a period of 10 days (the "grace") from the date of mailing such notice per section 21201 of California financial code. Borrower shall notify Lender in writing, by registered mail, of any change of address.

If collateral is not redeemed during the periods as provided herein, the Lender will become vested with all rights and title to the property submitted as collateral. It is agreed and understood that the Lender does not insure collateral property for the benefit of the Borrower and is not liable for loss or damage to the property resulting from burglary, theft, embezzlement, robbery, moths, fire, water, typical wear and deterioration resulting from handling and storage, acts of God, public enemy (vis major not) and/or other causes. The Lender shall be liable only when a loss is directly attributable to the Lender's gross negligence or willful misconduct. If the Lender is found liable to the Borrower, as liquidated damages, the Lender shall not be liable for more than 50% of the amount loaned.

Borrower acknowledges receipt of a copy of this Loan Contract and agrees to, and understands that, the Lender is authorized to deliver the pledged property to any person presenting the Borrower's copy, along with the full amount due, and that the lender is not liable to Borrower for any losses sustained by Borrower resulting therefrom.

Firearms will be delivered only to the Borrower and proper identification will be required.

The description on reverse side is based on a quick visual inspection. Lender does not warrant that the pledged property is of the exact size, dimension, weight, carat, color, cut, value or any other characteristic set forth therein. Unless specified, pledged property described is used, having normal wear and tear with scratches and dents.

No spouse may act as agent for Borrower.

I have read and understand this agreement, including the terms and conditions set forth on the reverse side, and agree to each of its provisions.

This contract is the entire agreement there are no other terms. Any changes must be in writing.
